February marks a significant month in the Japanese calendar. It is a time of transition, as the cold winter days gradually give way to the warmth of spring. This month is also marked by several important festivals and events that showcase the rich traditions and customs of Japan. In this article, we will delve into the captivating world of Things Japanese In February, providing you with a comprehensive guide to learning Japanese and engaging with Japanese culture.

Japanese Festivals in February

Setsubun (February 3-4)

Setsubun is a traditional Japanese festival that marks the transition from winter to spring. The highlight of this festival is the mame-maki (bean-throwing) ceremony, where people throw roasted soybeans at a large, scary mask representing evil spirits to drive them away and bring good luck for the coming year.

Kenkoku Kinen no Hi (National Foundation Day) (February 11)

Kenkoku Kinen no Hi is a national holiday in Japan that commemorates the foundation of the country by Emperor Jimmu in 660 BC. This day is marked by parades, flag-waving, and special ceremonies held at shrines and schools.

Valentine's Day (February 14)

Valentine's Day is a popular holiday in Japan, although it is celebrated differently than in many other countries. In Japan, women traditionally give chocolates to men as a token of their affection.

Japanese Customs and Traditions in February

Kanamara Matsuri (February 15)

The Kanamara Matsuri (Iron Phallus Festival) is a unique and controversial festival held annually in Kawasaki, Japan. This festival is dedicated to the god of fertility and is believed to bring good luck in love and marriage.

Yuki Matsuri (February 4-11)

The Yuki Matsuri (Snow Festival) is held in the city of Sapporo on the northern island of Hokkaido. This festival features elaborate snow sculptures, ice slides, and other winter-themed activities.

Uo Matsuri (February 15-16)

The Uo Matsuri (Fish Festival) is held in the city of Shizuoka on the central coast of Japan. This festival is marked by a colorful parade featuring floats decorated with fish and marine products.
